

THE LIBERATORS

THE LIBERATORS - The Story:

One of the longest existing rock bands in the Netherlands with an impressive track record. Playing since 1979 and still alive and kicking. The many European tours brought the band from Spain to Norway, sometimes invited by world stars to join their tour like Robert Plant (Led Zepellin), Gary Moore (†) and others. Tours were alternated with the release of five albums, released by renowned record companies in the Netherlands and abroad, such as Polydor and Phonogram.

The band became famous for its energetic live shows. The band still knows how to play pubs, halls and festivals with the unique mix of rock with a blues touch AND of course an energetic performance.

Sabbatical

The band was followed for a year by program maker Karin Hillebrand which resulted in the documentary "Sabbatical", broadcast by several TV broadcasters. The film premiered in a fully packed Lumiere movie theater in Maastricht on 19 May 2017, followed by a concert in the Muziekgieterij in Maastricht and can still be viewed online via the band's website.

Album 2021

The band made four albums and a handful of singles for Polydor, Phonogram and for the Belgian Munich Records. In 2020 the 4th album "Troubled Mind" was nominated for best Blues CD, released in The Netherlands. In 2021 the long awaited new album will be released by the Swedish record label GMR Music and is called: 'Waitin'.

The music of The Liberators can best be described as solid rock blues music based on the roots of our contemporary popular music. Several songs on the new album "Waitin'" refer to these originals, such as Waitin' with a link to the heavy electric blues, Can't Wait Another Day and Look for More with slightly symphonic rock influences and a slight penchant for Jazz and Fusion, Clash as a tribute to punk, Money Talks with a Motown intro, Fooling Around with Reggae influences and Wrong Distraction as a more traditional fingerpicking blues song.
